About Micro Needling

Micro needling penetrates the epidermis creating thousands of micro perforations per second. The creation of these perforations enables the delivery of vitamins and collagen directly into the stratum basal layer where they are most effective. This also triggers the body's natural healing response.

When the micro needling penetrates the skin, the needles create controlled damages so just the epidermis is affected. This creates an inflammation reaction which initiates the release of interleukins and growth factors that vastly improves the condition of the skin.

Skin is firmer, fine lines and wrinkles are visible improved, pores become refined and circulation is stimulated.

As the needle depth is at a maximum of 0.5mm there is less trauma to the skin and bleeding is unlikely as there is no blood supply in the epidermis.
